

Books Of Reputed Racketeer Sought

New York (AP)—Big Michael Dalessio, reluctant witness in an inquiry into Staten Island crime and alleged official corruption, has a return engagement with the State Crime commission today.

Dalessio and two brothers, John and Alexander, own an estate in Pike county, Pa., known as "Wild Acres". It is located back of Dingmans Ferry, Pa. and covers some 3,500 acres with a palatial residence and hunting lodge.

The witness told the commission about 10 or 12 years ago he went into business with his older brother, John in the Dee Cigarette Co. Later, he became owner of Monroe Music Co. a juke box and record business in East Stroudsburg, Pa.; Town & Country Motors Co., an auto agency, and the Staten Island Radio & Television Co.

TO PROVE her charge that detectives used strong-arm tactics in arresting her, Mrs. Anna Wentworth, of Staten Island, N. Y., exhibits bruises for newsmen to see. She was ordered arrested on perjury charges by Richmond District Attorney Herman Methfessel (bottom) after testifying that she had seen the latter at the home of the Dalessio brothers, described as higher-ups of gambling on Staten Island. The Dalessios own an estate, "Wild Acres," near Dingmans Ferry, Pa.

Allies, Reds Discuss New Peace Talks

Tokyo, Monday (AP)—Allied and Communist liaison officers met today to decide on a date for resumption of the Red-suspended Korean armistice talks.

The meeting was at Panmunjom, five miles east of the truce city of Kaesong and some 30 air miles northwest of Seoul.

It followed by only a few hours a Communist proposal for quick resumption of full-dress negotiations without bothering immediately with prior conditions.

The Reds and the United Nations command differed sharply in their message exchanges as to how to arrange an agreement on the neutrality of Kaesong.

Korean Red Premier Kim Il Sung and Gen. Peng Teh-Hual, commander of Chinese forces in Korea, said the full armistice delegations could discuss "appropriate machinery" to deal with future and alleged past violations of the conference neutrality zone.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Allied supreme commander, told the Reds yesterday he had instructed his liaison officers to give careful consideration to conditions for resuming the talks "in order to minimize the likelihood of further interruptions."

While the liaison officers met at Panmunjom, Ridgway and Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, senior U. N. armistice delegate, conferred at Allied headquarters in Tokyo.

Some Republican Senators Demand Gabrielson Probe

Washington (AP)—Some Republican senators, demanding the scalp of GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson, yesterday urged full investigation of the $18,500,000 government loans to a firm he heads.

Senator Hoey (D-NC) Chairman of a Senate investigations subcommittee, announced they will get their wish and quickly.

Gabrielson's Democratic counterpart, William M. Boyle Jr., already is in hot water with the investigations group, which is probing into his relations with the Reconstruction Finance Corp. (RFC).

Hoey said the committee hopes to wind up its investigation of Boyle this week. It will turn promptly, he added, to the RFC loan to Carthage-Hydrocol, Inc., a gasoline refining venture of which Gabrielson is president and general counsel.

The reputed boss of Staten Island's racket, who defied the commission at its Saturday session, was ordered to return today—and this time bring with him his financial records which he failed to produce at his first appearance.

Frequent clashes between Dalessio and crime probers enlivened the witness' first day on the stand. His truculence and evasiveness so infuriated Joseph M. Proskauer, commission chairman, that he warned Dalessio he was courting a citation for contempt.

Several times, the squat, broad-shouldered witness denounced the hearing as a "Russian Kangaroo court."

Although the reputed racketeer declined to produce his financial records, the commission developed that he filed income tax returns between 1942 and 1949 giving his gross earnings as about $85 a week.

After making this point, committee counsel John M. Harlan introduced a photostatic copy of a 1950 bank statement in which a Michael Dalessio listed his net worth of $741,000.

When Dalessio refused to acknowledge that the signature on the statement was his, Proskauer angrily adjourned the hearing. It was at this point that he instructed the witness to return today and advised him to have a lawyer and his financial records with him.

The chairman coupled the advice with a warning that Dalessio could expect no "further forbearance" when he returns to the stand.

Dalessio's brothers, John and Alexander, are scheduled to be called as witnesses later.

Michael Dalessio, one of three brothers who reputedly boss Staten Island's gambling and waterfront rackets, was the first witness to appear before the commission following Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's action Friday night in suspending District Attorney Herman T. Methfessel.

The governor held that Methfessel had acted with "gross abuse of power" when he arrested Mrs. Anna Wentworth who had testified against him at a previous commission session. Methfessel charged the woman perjured herself when she testified she saw him in a house where men were gambling.

Before Dalessio took the stand secret movies were shown to the crime probers picturing Staten Island bookmakers passing money for bets to runners. One of the bookies shown in the movies was Alexander Dalessio.

Last Wednesday, Methfessel testified before the commission he had never arrested or investigated the three Dalessio brothers.

But four Staten Island business men testified they placed horse bets with the Dalessios or their aides during the past seven or eight years.

When Methfessel testified before the commission he denied visiting the estate of the three brothers, "Wild Acres" near Dingmans Ferry, Pa., and gave the impression he did not know the brothers socially.

Harlan, the chief prosecutor, said Michael admitted during testimony before the commission he had been charged with vagrancy in Pennsylvania in 1947 and received a pardon by the Governor.

Harlan added this particular testimony was not developed further, however, and there were no further details such as the circumstances of the arrest.

Wallace Writes To Mr. Truman

Washington (AP)—President Truman yesterday made public a letter from Henry A. Wallace denying the former vice president recommended a "political coalition" between the Chinese Communists and Nationalists in 1944.

Wallace also denied that John Carter Vincent and Owen Lattimore, who accompanied him on his China mission for the late President Roosevelt, influenced him in writing his recommendations on how best to solidify China against the Japanese who were threatening the whole of east China at the time.

2,683 Freshmen At Penn State

State College (AP)—The Pennsylvania State College has a record freshmen class of 2,683 students on the main campus this year.

President Milton S. Eisenhower reported yesterday that the total includes 1,924 men and 759 women. The largest previous freshman class was 2,225 in 1942.

U.N. Captures Key Height In Costly Battle

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Monday, (AP)—American capture of a high peak on "heart-break ridge" in a costly battle with hand grenades and bayonets yesterday apparently climaxed the Allied limited offensive on the eastern Korea front.

Except for the fighting around the craggy ridge there have been no new general attacks for the past three days in the eastern offensive which began August 18.

Only three bone-tired infantrymen, remnants of a platoon, made it to the crest in the final bitter fighting. Reinforcements quickly followed to help the trio repulse an almost immediate Red counter-attack.

Whether they could hold the ridge was still at issue. The Communists were massing heavy elements for a possible new drive to throw the Americans off the crest.

Far East Air force warplanes hammered at Communist rail and vehicular traffic in 850 sorties yesterday. Superforts flew through moderate flak to hit a rail bridge at Suncheon.

Carrier-based planes struck Communist rail yards south of Hamhung on the northeast coast. The battleship, New Jersey, bombarded enemy positions below Kaesong with her 16-inch guns.

A North Korean communique broadcast by Moscow radio said that 10 fierce attacks by United Nations troops were repulsed on the central and eastern fronts.

Overdosing Kills Heiress

Detroit (AP)—One of America's richest women, intent on preserving her patrician beauty, was dead yesterday of what her doctors described as the effects of overdosing.

Mrs. Marian Peck Miles, 44-year-old blonde socialite heiress to a Canadian canvas fortune, passed away at her 31-room Georgian mansion in suburban Gross Pointe farms shortly before Saturday midnight. She has spent 58 days in an oxygen tent.

Her doctors, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said she had been suffering from purpura anemia. They said the ailment was caused by her insistence on trimming down her weight despite their warnings.

Mrs. Miles, listed on numerous social registers, inherited an estimated $100,000,000 from her father, the late Francis G. Peck, Peck, who died on the Island of Capri in 1925, was a merchant, banker, financier and philanthropist with extensive holdings in Canada and this country and in foreign industries.

Douglas attacked Tax Deductibles

Washington (AP)—Senator Douglas (D-Ill.) said yesterday he will offer an amendment to "the tax increase bill to eliminate "business boozes" as a tax deductible item under the heading of entertainment.

Douglas said the amendment also would limit business travel expense deductions on income tax returns to $12 a day in an effort to "put a stop to high living at public expense."

King George 'Satisfactory' After Surgery

London, Monday, (AP)—Five royal physicians remained throughout the night near the bedside of King George VI whose sickly lung was operated on yesterday.

The vigil was shared by a small crowd outside Buckingham palace through the hours of darkness.

It was the crucial first post-operative night after surgery to remove part or all the King's diseased lung—a "resection," the doctors called it.

First announcement of the operation performed Sunday warned the King's subjects that "anxiety must remain for some days."

A second official bulletin issued by the eight-man medical team attending the 55-year-old monarch said his condition was "as satisfactory as can be expected."

While the devout prayed and anxious crowds milled outside Buckingham palace, where the operation was performed, eight medical men posted this pencilled bulletin on the palace gate:

"The King underwent an operation for lung resection this morning. Whilst anxiety must remain for some days, his Majesty's immediate post-operative condition is satisfactory."

London chest surgeons said lung resection could mean amputation of either all or part of the sickly lung.

The bulletin could mean cancer, a cyst or bronchiectasis—a condition involving a weakening of the bronchial tube carrying air to and from the lung, specialists said.

Some said the speed with which the operation was decided upon suggested cancer.

Hours after the doctors issued their original post-operation bulletin, palace sources would not disclose the nature of the King's ailment beyond the original announcement of structural changes in one lung.

A crowd of several thousand stood outside the palace last night in respectful silence but police patrols reminded the people from time to time: "No noise." There had been spontaneous cries outside immediately after the operation.

"God save the King!" people in the waiting crowd shouted when the printed bulletin went up.

The gaunt King was on the operating table about two hours in a specially equipped theater on the second floor of his 200-room palace.

A palace spokesman said Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will go ahead with plans to fly to Canada October 2 for a Canadian-U. S. trip unless the King takes a turn for the worse.

Some doctors said surgery may be more dangerous for the King than for most people, because of his history of circulatory troubles. He underwent a spinal nerve operation in March, 1945, to improve the blood circulation to his right leg.

The haggard, gray-faced monarch put up a brave front on the eve of yesterday's surgery. Palace sources said he seemed very happy and fully confident Saturday night.

While the surgeons worked, Queen Elizabeth and their pretty younger daughter, Princess Margaret, waited together in a room near the operating theater.

Rent Gouging, Substandard Housing Found In Senate Investigation At Camp Atterbury

Washington, (AP)—Rent gouging and substandard housing are so widespread around military camps that corrective action must be taken, a Senate subcommittee reported yesterday.

But, it added in a report, the solution must come from the communities.

The report was from the armed services preparedness subcommittee headed by Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Texas) which sent investigators to 16 Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine training camps.

The subcommittee reported conditions found at the camps were similar to those uncovered by the group in an earlier investigation of three installations—Camp Brookridge, Ky., Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and Camp Rucker, Ala.

Johnson said the first investigation revealed such shocking conditions that a second, more thorough inquiry was made to determine the extent of "this shameful profiteering from American servicemen."

"There can now be no doubt that it is widespread—so widespread that corrective action must be taken," he said.

"As we state in this report, the ultimate solution must come from the communities themselves. But we must give those communities every legitimate aid within our power."

Johnson said his group will have an open hearing within a few days to give the armed services an opportunity to present recommendations.

Discussing the situation at Camp Atterbury, Ind., where the 28th National Guard Infantry Division from Pennsylvania is stationed, the committee said:

"While rent gouging and substandard unsanitary accommodations are not as prevalent as in other parts of the country, conditions are by no means satisfactory."

The report said that as a result of the housing shortages families are scattered in sections of Indiana many miles from camp.

"Worse than the expense and inconvenience," the report added, "have been the large number of traffic fatalities involving camp personnel. Since reactivation of the camp in 1949 there have been 43 fatalities in offpost automobile accidents. Of these, 38 have been men commuting long distances to be with their families."

"The camp command has been cognizant of the housing shortage and had made efforts to alleviate the hardships resulting from the situation," the report said.

The committee noted however that "many examples of substandard housing and rent gouging were found in the area surrounding the camp."

It said 13 apartments have been carved out of what was formerly a large single family dwelling. This 15-family dwelling is located six miles from camp. The occupants are all servicemen. Rents for these apartments range from $65 for a one-room furnished apartment to $85 for two furnished rooms. Only nine apartments have their own private sanitary facilities, the other families sharing community bathing facilities. The committee said the place was kept clean.

Taxes Stall Senate Group

Harrisburg, (AP)—The Senate Finance committee left a decision on the House-passed $138,220,000 tax package up in the air last night.

A six-hour closed meeting brought only this comment from Chairman T. Newell Wood (R-Luzerne):

"We may have something to report out Monday (for floor action) and we may not."

Wood said the committee will ask Attorney General Robert E. Woodside to prepare amendments to the compromise tax program approved by the House last week.

He declined to say, however, what the amendments were about and exactly to which bills in the package they would apply.

"If these (amendments) are satisfactory," the chairman told newsmen, "We will give the Governor enough dollars for his program."

Mother Charged With Hugging Baby To Death

Maywood, Calif., (AP)—A young mother is suspected of hugging her first-born child so hard that it died.

Mrs. Mildred Ferguson Parson, 25, was arrested Saturday after her husband, Elmer, reported the death of their daughter, Katherine, six months old.

Police Chief William Durham said Mrs. Parson told him she changed the baby's clothes, then picked up the youngster and loved her.

When she put Katherine back in the crib, Durham said, the infant was dead.

Mrs. Parson is held in the county jail on suspicion of murder.

It was her first child. An autopsy will be held today.

Deputy Finds Hole Hacked In Ceiling

Attempted escape of two prisoners from the Monroe county jail was foiled Saturday by a sharp-eared deputy sheriff.

The two had hacked a rough 4-by-16-inch hole through the ceiling of their cell with a shiny, yellow-handled jack-knife.

The frustrated prisoners, now in solitary confinement at the same jail, are Thomas A. McAndrew, 31, Wilkes-Barre, and Jacob Pentinga, 25, Ashley.

Arrested by police in Oakland, Cal., they were returned here in custody of Sheriff Amie F. Altomose and a State policeman September 12.

Both are charged with burglary and larceny. Both are ex-convicts.

Only a few more inches of wood and a few hours' work stood between them and illegal freedom Saturday when Deputy Victor H. Henning climbed to the attic of the jail.

Henning had been sitting alone in the front office during the afternoon.

About 1:30 p. m., he said, he heard faint noises "like rats gnawing on wood." The deputy went outside and circled the outer walls. He scanned the barred and screened windows but saw nothing.

Back in the office again, Henning heard the same noise.

He climbed the stairs softly, passed the second floor and went on up the narrow flight leading to the jail attic.

The attic is kept bare as Mathew Hubbard's cupboard. Visible on the floor are rows of projecting quarter-inch bolts.

The cells beneath are celled by sheet metal. The bolts are to hold the sheet metal to the two-inch-thick planking of the attic floor.

Alongside the north wall in the attic Henning saw what was making the noise. A hand was working away with a jack-knife at the edge of the planking from the cell beneath.

Henning watched the hand at its work for a moment. Then he shouted "Hey!"

The hand jerked downward, the deputy said. There was silence. In about three minutes, the hand reappeared with the jack-knife and went to work again.

Again Henning yelled "Hey!" This time the hand disappeared for good, the deputy said.

Henning shouted down to Deputy Ed Young who had been sleeping. Young mounted to the attic and covered the hole with his pistol.

Henning returned to the office to call for State police assistance.

As he was about to telephone Pica, Don Henney and Alex G. Keam entered. They had come to escort another prisoner to his hearing.

The three men went into the cell block. Hennings said he called first for McAndrew.

"He came down and we searched him. He had nothing on him, so we put him in one cell," Henning said. "Then we called down Pentinga, searched him, and put him in a cell at the other end of the block."

Upon going up the the cell the two had occupied together since their commitment, Henning found everything in order. There were wood chips and bits of sawdust on the floor in the corner, directly under the hole. Bunks, however, were in their usual places.

The deputy said the two must have put their bunks one on top of the other, or tilted them on end against the wall to reach the high ceiling.

The knife was found in the hole, stuffed back between the planks and the sheet metal. In McAndrew's blanket a roll of brown cord 19 feet long was found.

Henning questioned the pair. They said they "found" the knife already hidden in the hole after they had pulled back a corner of the sheet metal.

The deputy, however, and Sheriff Amie F. Altomose, had another theory to offer:

"They think the knife might have (Continued on Page Five)

Army Pressed For Appraisal

Washington (AP)—Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) told Secretary of Defense Lovett yesterday the whole defense program must be recast if atomic weapons are available for land, sea and air forces.

Ferguson, in a letter, pressed Lovett for a quick appraisal of Senator McMahon's (D-Conn.) proposal to convert the armed forces to atomic weapons at what McMahon said could be an annual saving of $30,000,000 in defense costs.

"I want the information before a conference committee meets this week on the $59,500,000,000 defense bill," Ferguson told a reporter. "If McMahon's plan is feasible, the committee ought to know about it before it acts finally on this huge appropriation."

The Senate-House committee faces the task of compromising different versions of the measure, since the House voted the armed services $3,475,000,000 less than the Senate.

Ferguson wrote Lovett that if atomic weapons "are available in the variety and to the degree suggested by Senator McMahon and are feasible for broad military purposes, they will call for a vast reorientation of our armament program."

Lt. Spencer Slightly Hurt In Accident

A Salvation Army officer was injured when the car in which she was riding hit a telephone pole at 11:30 Saturday night two miles northeast of East Stroudsburg on Route 209.

She was Lt. Dorothy Spencer, 24, of 303 S. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg. Lieutenant Spencer was driven to the Monroe County General hospital by her superior, Maj. May R. Adam, of the same address, also a passenger. The lieutenant was released after treatment for knee bruises.

Stroudsburg State police said the driver of the car was Mary Hillard, 19, of 309 Main St., Stroudsburg, a bench worker. Apparently the car went out of control, left the highway, and struck the Bell Telephone Co. pole in front of the Mt. Tom restaurant.

Damage to the pole was $50; to the 1948 sedan $300 to the entire front end, police said.

Relief From Fumes

In this session of the Pennsylvania General Assembly no one can say with any confidence just what the members thereof will do, but in the matter of at least one comparatively minor piece of legislation, affirmative action by the Senate will save a lot of headaches.

And when we say headaches we mean just that, for the bill in question is one sponsored by Rep. Blaine C. Hocker of Dauphin County in which he calls for overhead exhausts to be installed on diesel-powered vehicles in order to carry the noxious exhaust gases above the road level and thus keep them out of the interiors of following cars.

Everyone who drives has had the experience of being caught in heavy traffic or on steep hills behind the diesels, and while the unpleasant odor from their exhausts may not be fatal it is certainly no boon to travel.

The lower House has passed the bill and sent it to the upper chamber, where it is now in the hands of the Senate highways committee. Let us hope that the Senators, who have probably all inhaled the noxious fumes too, pass it and send it to the Governor for signature.

Lesson In Journalism

Recently in Bucharest, the Romanian "press correspondents" held a "Congress." This meeting, according to the Bucharest radio, was called to promote "freedom of the press" and to advertise the Romanian press which, the radio said, "speaks the truth."

Main task of the Romanian correspondents, said the Communist radio, "is to popularize achievements within the framework of the five-year plan, for the construction of Socialism, and the men who realize them."

"They must tear off the masks of saboteurs, spies and the agents of imperialism."

"The regional party committees must closely guide the control of the papers."

It's all very democratic and thrilling. Just as it is in Czechoslovakia where "freedom of the press" has been so magnificently upheld by the imprisonment of William N. Oatis.

Veto Upset

By lop-sided majorities, Congress has overridden President Truman's veto of a bill providing special pensions to war veterans who became disabled from ailments not connected with their service.

The President said legislation granting benefits to veterans should be limited to "special and unique needs arising directly from military service."

If there are to be benefits for the type of disabilities provided in the bill, he said, they should apply to all citizens, not merely veterans.

He said the bill eventually would require the government to pay out $400 million a year, although the first year's cost has been estimated by the Veterans Administration at $16,700,000.

The bill applies to veterans of World Wars I and II and the Korean campaign. Veterans of previous wars already are granted similar benefits.

As a matter of charity, such payments to helpless citizens, whether veterans or not, command a sympathetic view. As a matter of cost, this program could become a serious problem in future years.

The bill had the zealous backing of all veterans' organizations, which makes the stand of the President and the nine Senators and 45 House members who voted to uphold the veto a matter of more than ordinary political courage.

The average tobacco plant yields enough seed to set 66 acres of tobacco.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

The president of a great Southern railroad is noted for his patience and humility. He says he got a lesson he never forgot the first day he was appointed station master in a tiny Mississippi way-stop. Two Negro farmers came along to ask some questions regarding a bill of lading, and the new official decided to put on the dog.

The Negroes waited patiently while he hustled about the station doing nothing, and then one said very distinctly to the other, "Dat's life for you, brother! Dat little dog station, de bigger de agent." What the young official learned that moment helped make him president of the road!

A young man, obviously ill at ease, sought out the lingerie department of a big store, and confided to the clerk, "I've got to bring home either a casserole or a canisole. Darned if I can remember which." "Let's see, now," prompted the clerk with a perfectly straight face. "Is your chicken dead or alive?"

Hollywood

By Gene Handsaker

Hollywood—Brace yourself, moviegoers, for a couple of real weirdies.

"The Day the Earth Stood Still" land, a flying saucer from another planet on the public lawn in Washington, D. C. "When Worlds Collide" smashes dear old Mother Earth to bits in a cataclysmic crash with another planet.

Neither of these fantasies, thank the still stable heavens, is very convincing. From the saucer steps a tall, slender, super-intelligent gent, Klaatu, played by Britain's Michael Rennie, who was Jean Simmons' lover in "Trio." With him is a mechanical monster that spouts a ray that disintegrates guns, tanks, and men.

Klaatu wants to warn earthlings to confine their warring to this planet or be destroyed by more advanced spheres. But world leaders are too busy squabbling to convene and listen. So Klaatu escapes from a hospital, posing as "Mr. Carpenter" in a well-fitting stolen suit, to study humans. Finally, to demonstrate his power, he turns off electricity all over the earth for 30 minutes.

He has learned to speak English (his British accents from getting too broad) by monitoring earth's radio. But how he has learned to read the language—or for that matter, perform simpler feats like tying a four-in-hand tie—isn't explained.

He meets sympathetic Patricia Neal, her admiring son (Billy Gray), and her annoyed suitor (Hugh Marlowe). Not even the brief appearances of Drew Pearson, Gabriel Heatter, H. V. Kaltenborn, and Elmer Davis, at their microphones, giving the lowdown on the space man, will

These Days — By George E. Sokolsky

Sokolsky

Republicans Without Program—The struggle for power within the Republic can partly be seen in the other Democratic triumph, it needs to be faced honestly that although General Eisenhower holds the imagination of large segments of the population, particularly among businessmen and the middle class, for the politicians he is a stalking horse.

All the prospective candidates, and there are oodles of them, realize that in a clinch between General Eisenhower and Senator Robert A. Taft, someone might be a compromise—drafted, they call it.

The prospective draftees are Thomas E. Dewey, Harold Stassen, Earl Warren, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Governor Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, to mention a few. As a matter of fact, anyone with the rank of governor or United States senator would enjoy being drafted for the presidential nomination and some are even hopeful for the vice-presidential.

It is, of course, a natural and legal right for any native-born American, of the proper age to be a candidate for president. And some of our presidents in the past have been no better than some that offer themselves today. Yet, these are critical times and the country requires a wise, experienced, moral leadership. It requires a personality of the highest calibre.

General Eisenhower could only run by consent of Harry Truman. Specifically that means that if Harry Truman does not wish Eisenhower to run, he can, quietly, unostentatiously, stack the cards to have it that way. He can keep him so busy that Eisenhower's withdrawal from Europe to run for office could be a public scandal.

On the other hand, if Harry Truman did the wholly unexpected, he might favor Eisenhower, even as a Republican, should the General so declare himself, assured that Eisenhower would, for a while, be merciful toward the record and personalities of the Democratic regime, of which he is now a part and has been since World War II.

However, should Eisenhower run, he might disfigure the cumulative wrath of General MacArthur, who, realizing that the years have probably eliminated him as a candidate—although his friends do not hold to that notion—seeks for his country a moral resurrection. Douglas MacArthur does not regard Ike Eisenhower as a resurrector. He is likely to make it difficult for any candidate, particularly for Eisenhower, by bringing before the public the realistic issues facing the American people. This, none of the politicians desires for the next campaign.

Thomas E. Dewey is an anti-Taft candidate. He resents Taft's leadership and stature. He also dislikes being pushed to one side. Dewey is an able man, but not too graceful in his political relationships. His opposition to Taft is without meaning, except that the defeat of Taft has become a monomania with him.

He may succeed in preventing Taft from being nominated. His combination with Senator Duff of Pennsylvania and Governor Warren of California will give Dewey great force in the convention, but it will split their party wide open. The Taft followers will not accept again a Wilkie-type Republican nor will they take Dewey. They will either stay away from the polls, as many Republicans have done during the past three elections, or they will vote for Harry Truman as a protest against "Me-Tooism."

The essential difference in following is that a generation of Republicans has appeared who are either seeking an end to the immoralities, corruption, deceit and connivings that have characterized the Truman second term or they are liberals, as confused as left wing liberals and with equal lack of definition as to a program. This split is real.

Senator Wayne Morse, for instance, is in no manner related to the Republican party except for the legalism of running under its banner. Once elected, he associates himself with the prime minister, Dean Acheson. Morse is not without a following and acceptance among some Republicans. The same could be said for Governor Driscoll of New Jersey and Senator Sclatostall of Massachusetts. These are important political personalities whose attitudes do count. As they cannot be ignored, the Republicans are split.

The time has probably passed for an effective coalition between the conservative Republicans and the conservative Democrats. Had such a coalition come into existence, it would, in the present mood of the people, have swept the country. What it amounts to is that there is a popular wish for a decent, constructive, conservative candidacy and administration. But the politicians, who control delegations and conventions, are playing solitaire—at which they rarely win.

Washington Report

By Fulton Lewis Jr.

Washington—Anyone inclined to strike a blow for freedom these days couldn't do better than to send a check to Hiwassee College, Madisonville, Tenn.

Hiwassee is a church-supported college with an enrollment of 300 students who are unable in most cases to finance an education by themselves. It is short on building and living space—two new dormitories are needed—but long on its distaste for socialism or any form of Federal paternalism.

Dr. D. B. Youell, president of Hiwassee, in February, 1959, started Washington bureaucrats when he rejected an offer of free surplus potatoes. Here is what he said:

"Yes, we need potatoes, but even more, we need to preserve our integrity. An economy of waste may be expedient but it is wrong, and we will have no part in it." He went into the open market and bought potatoes for the college cafeteria.

The surplus potatoes, of course, were some salvaged from the mountainous piles the Department of Agriculture was destroying by covering with kerosene.

Dr. Youell's independence and belief in principles went right over the head of Oscar Ewing, federal security administrator. For some unexplainable reason, Congress gave Ewing $300,000 to give away to colleges for housing programs. There are already 19 agencies in the government dealing with housing problems, but Ewing got the cash and set up an office of education to handle the handouts.

Hiwassee College got a note from Ewing stating that the FSA was ready to cut it a slice of taxpayer's pie. Dr. Youell examined his principles again and told Ewing:

"The government offer to lend us money at something like two and one-half per cent over a period of 40 years is quite a mirage. The taxpayers not only will have to provide the $300,000 for the loan, but it will cost them 10 to 20 per cent to administer that sort of thing—what with the salaries, paper work, etc. that will be necessary."

"I'm not going to mortgage this college and let the next generation pay the bill."

Needless to say, neither the National Education Association nor any other agency dominated by the bureaucrats has asked Dr. Youell to expand his philosophy for the benefit of other college presidents or teachers.

Dr. Youell believes that self-sufficiency and work towards solving the problems of Hiwassee, instead of opening the door for the bureaucrats, will not only keep Socialism off the campus, but is the American way of doing things. He said he needs money but that "a federal loan to a church college would give the government a certain amount of control over the institution."

He doesn't think that Hiwassee should sell its liberty and independence even at two and one-half per cent.

People with money used to donate sums to colleges. Now, of course, ordinary gift and inheritance taxes have dried up the chief source of college-bound money. The bureaucrats saw to that. But the need for outside cash for colleges has increased instead of diminished during the past few years. Like everything

My New York

SUB FOR WINCHELL — JOE

New York—Until recently I had figured that of all the bizarre occupations in this eerie area, the most unusual was that of the man who stands in the middle of the Belmont Park race track with a flag, waiting to slow down the horses and send them back to the gate if there has been a false start. There has been something like one false start in the last 33 years or so.

Today, however, I caught up with a local girl who runs this forlorn soul a close race for the honors. Her name is Barbara Allen (after the mountain witch of the same name), and technically, she is an odor consultant.

She is a big, good-looking honey blonde who specializes in tracking down and eliminating undesirable odors, for all sorts of clients. In other words, if your grocery store is situated on the wrong side of a soap factory and the wind blows you no good, Miss Allen finds some way to divert nature's forces elsewhere or, more likely, counteract their effect chemically.

For example, there's a miniature golf course over in Brooklyn that has been plagued by both mosquitoes, which don't smell particularly but do bite, and a dump-type stench. Barbara promptly was called in, she devised a mosquito spray with a pleasant scent, and now the whole place smells, she says, "like a country day."

Miss Allen comes from Palestine, Tex., where she worked at one time in the cosmetics department of a store. She got interested in deodorants, oddly enough—you'd be surprised not many people have ventured into this field—and last January, after five years in New York at assorted jobs, she went in wholeheartedly for her first love, smells. Now, she reports, she is making a reasonable living and having the time of her young life.

When servicemen in Korea wrote home frantically that the girls there would hate nothing to do with them because they smelled like fresh butter and were, therefore, repulsive to the Oriental—who has a smell of his own—Barbara came to the rescue. She sent them uncoated water soluble chlorophyll tablets, manufactured by one of her clients—and their B. O. was gone with the first wind.

Then there was the case of the goat which the ASPCA here was forced to shelter when it was kicked out of two homes because it smelled badly. Barbara deodorized it—as much as a goat can be deodorized—and now it has a fine new home, with two goat companions. Previously, even other goats shunned it.

"The use of scents to make life more livable," she told me, "is a field that's hardly been tapped—but it should be, in time. Did you know, for example, that jasmine or lilac scents else, it costs more to run a college today.

When the politicians got a little nervous about what they had done to the college they thought up the federal grant idea and brought in people like Ewing to handle the details. The idea was that money seized from philanthropists by high taxes could be routed through the U. S. Treasury to the colleges just as well as if it went directly. The only thing wrong is that Ewing and the others are politicians, and few living members of that cult ever give away anything for nothing.

The president of Hiwassee College took one whiff and said "NO." That meant Hiwassee rich, or Dr. Youell popular with the Socialists in the educational systems of the country. But he still has his integrity and a strong moral sense that the American way of doing things will work out best in the long run. Right now he needs money for these two dormitories. He ought to get it the right way, soothe the nerves, and hospitals in some places are dusting the sheets with it? Also, that magnolia stimulates the appetite? I'm trying right now to get some restaurants for clients, to intrude the scent of magnolia into their places."

Cedar, on the other hand, makes clothes smell fresh, and laundries and mattress companies are great users of it. The scent of pine is excellent for sinus sufferers, and lavender, of all things is used to trap lions and tigers. As a matter of fact, catnip also is used to trap lions and tigers, but doesn't come under the smell department.

"Redheads, you know, have the most acute sense of smell," Barbara told me, "and next are brunets and last blondes. However, the redheads also have the strongest body odor, with brunets in the middle and blondes again last."

"This isn't too bad with Americans, who eat so much dairy food—your body odor stems basically from the food you digest—but when you run across an Eskimo, who smells of blubber, or a Mediterranean type, who smells of garlic, it might be well to beware of redheads."

Miss Allen's life work has had one adverse effect. It has frightened away more than one likely young suitor. "They think that all I do is go around sniffing, she told me sadly, "and they hate the prospect of being caught with B. O. So they don't call me."

This is a shame, because Miss Allen is quite a dish—and she smells as fresh as a country day.

Looking at Life

By Erich Brandeis

"The Spark of Life" has been discovered, according to a magazine article, and we are coming closer and closer to the question of when we came.

Atomic airplanes will soon be built. The first order for one has already been placed.

Within a very few years we shall be able to reach other planets. Any day now the announcement may come that communication with Mars or Venus has been established.

There were almost 500 highway deaths during the Labor day weekend.

Our losses in Korea now amount to more than $3,000.

President Truman said in a recent speech that "fantastic weapons" are now ready—weapons more formidable by far than the atomic bomb, weapons that can destroy millions at a time, and bring an end to all civilization.

Industrial accidents are increasing year by year.

Hardly a day passes that somewhere there is not a plane smash-up, a railroad disaster, an explosion, or some sort of an accident—all due to PROGRESS.

Sometimes I wonder whether the human race has not got far ahead of itself.

Has it not erected a Frankenstein monster that will eventually destroy it?

It seems that with all our peace conferences and all the wonderful achievements of the human brain EVERY SINGLE THING that man devises is eventually used for purposes of destruction.

Medicine has discovered many wonderful drugs.

So what does Man do? He develops bacterial warfare.

Atomic knowledge can be used for all sorts of worthwhile purposes. It can bring about a new era in industry, in agriculture, in everyday life.

But man is not satisfied with that. First he has to utilize it to make bombs and to destroy himself.

Man invented the automobile engine. First came the one-cylinder, then the two, the four-cylinder car. Now it is eight cylinders, 150 horse-power, 125 miles an hour. And every year the record for automobile accidents and highway deaths is broken.

I wrote about this very subject before. But the ink on the paper is hardly dry when something else comes along—something more wonderful and more deadly, something that gives man an ever better chance for suicide and murder.

It isn't a pretty picture, I know. But neither is the picture of boys in wheel chairs or coffins pretty. Neither is the picture of a plane with 50 passengers crashing to the ground pretty. Neither is the picture of a morgue with a careful of what was once holiday making human beings pretty.

Who is to blame? I don't know. But I guess it all started with Adam and Eve when they ate the forbidden fruit.

Man has eaten of forbidden fruit ever since.

And paid the penalty for it.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"May Do Better Next Time Out" "Defiance" and "Bookie" ran a dead heat, the entry "Law" and "Order" out of the money, in that pretty humiliating New York horserace, bookmaker and cop bribery case in which eighteen policemen became suddenly as free as the robins in the spring. There's been no greater upset in racing since Jim Dandys Saratoga victory of some decades ago and Harry Trumans in the last election. The racing handicappers' comment could well read:

Clam-up . . . Easy victor. McDonald . . . Bumped and cut down in stretch. Public Interest . . . Also ran. The Bench . . . Bled. Truth . . . Tempered with. Two Dollars Better . . . May stage comeback. Court Dignity . . . Left at post. Blackstone . . . Scratched. Leshowitz . . . Slide slipped. The Eighteen . . . Got away fast, will bear watching. Justice . . . Not in form. Decorum . . . Broke down. Jurisprudence . . . Ran in handgags.

Law Enforcement . . . Destroyed. "Justice" and "Public Interest" coupled as an entry, were what the racing fans call "sore going" all through the stretch. Gross, the witness, never looked like a router anyhow. Everything in his form showed him purely a sprinter not to be depended on in a distance event. That he would quit, split a hoof or show a tendency to sprawl in heavy going seemed obvious, and how Miles McDonald, the district attorney, came to let his whole case of police bribery rest on this one witness is the mystery of the moment. Nothing has amazed the public more than the fact he could find anything in the form sheets to make him risk everything on a perfumed, patient-leather-haired smoothie and confessed briber, Mr. McDonald not only backed him as a long shot but as a long shot with no class, no thoroughbred lines and no good form anywhere in the past performances.

It was a queer showing. Gross started, as it were, in New York, fled to Atlantic City track and finished at a track that might be called "Lettem Downs." If they were any winner among the bettors it was a cop who played "Clam-up" and "Gross" in the daily double. A man depended on as the chief witness in a sensational bribery case against Metropolitan police department walked out of the court, to all intents and purposes, with the phonograph playing "Horse, Horse, Horse, Crazy Over Horse," and a bugle blowing "Boys and Saddles" in the distance. Yes, he got a big fine and a long sentence, but the underworld boys unfortunately seem best at the weights these sad days and the public is already too surprised to be amazed if it should ultimately turn out that Gross, after a series of appeals, turns up at a select bathing resort on probation in care of his personal tellors and photographers. (With maybe an election as the bookie of the month.) He did everything to show contempt for the American courts except come to court in a jockey suit and ride a horse onto the witness stand. The judge set no records for judicial temperament, tribunal poise or calm restraint.

In the stretch it was muddying going, with the leering, nose-thumbing bookie and the judge running wild, bumping all the entries and making a rodeo of the event. In our book the judge created an atmosphere so lacking in dignity and impressiveness that the defendant, wise-cracking Gross was encouraged in the idea he was in a hippodrome not a majestic court of law. So what? So the public gets caught in the starting gate, the forces of law and order look as if they have popped an asslet, eighteen policemen held as bribe takers are okayed for tomorrow's entries and Mr. Gross, surrounded by appeal lawyers, changes into another suit for a dead photograph. Eighteen hundred days in jail for Gross? Wanna bet?

Historic Eads bridge at St. Louis spans not one but two rivers.

Right Town But Wrong River: St. Louis Not On Mississippi

By GROVER BRINKMAN

St. Louis—Any school boy who has ever paged through a geography book knows that the city of St. Louis is located on the west bank of the Mississippi river. In fact, it's one of the largest cities in the United States fronting on the historic Father of Waters. At least that's what everyone thinks.

Now along comes the United States Geological Survey and very definitely says "Taint so!"

St. Louis has never been on the Mississippi river. Geographers and map makers, not to mention the thousands of natives and tourists, will question this. However, the Geological Survey has plenty of scientific fact back of their explosive statement.

St. Louis is not on the Mississippi. It's on the Missouri.

The Mississippi and the Missouri rivers merge into one giant stream about 16 miles north of St. Louis, near the city of St. Charles, Mo. However, according to the Geological Survey, their waters do not mix until far south of St. Louis. In fact, a complete merging of the Mississippi stream and the Missouri stream is not accomplished until more than 20 miles downstream from St. Louis' skyline.

Old rivermen claim that they can definitely tell when their boats are in the "Mississippi stream" or the "Missouri stream," as they approach St. Louis from "down river."

For some strange reason, the Missouri river's water does not merge with the Mississippi stream as the two rivers join above St. Louis. The Missouri forces the Mississippi toward the Illinois bank, and the two proceed southward, side by side, for more than 35 miles, before a complete merger is made.

How has this been ascertained? The Corps of Engineers has been aware of this uncanny fact for years, from aerial photographs and from samples of water taken from various sections of the stream. Only recently has the data been made public.

The Missouri stream carries much more silt than the Mississippi. When photographed, it is clearly identified, especially when color film is used.

With special sampling instruments, let down into the stream, the Corps of Engineers takes water samples to prove their contention. These samples prove without the shadow of a doubt that the Missouri stream forces the Mississippi stream to the East bank — and keeps it there, both upstream and downstream from St. Louis.

So St. Louis, definitely, is not on the Mississippi river. However, its smaller companion city, East St. Louis, Ill., on the east bank of the river, most assuredly is.

Another phenomenon is the fact that these two rivers, rushing side by side like two race horses on their way to the Gulf of Mexico, are spanned by no less than seven bridges in the St. Louis area, a fact that is not duplicated anywhere else in the world.

The silt load of these two rivers staggers the imagination. Try to visualize a huge pyramid of earth, more than a mile square, and higher than a 30-story building, and you'll get some idea of the silt load carried past St. Louis each year. This, remember, is choice topsoil of the midwest, being eroded from the farms in the river's watershed, carried to the delta, lost forever in the Gulf of Mexico.

Anyone who doubts that St. Louis is not on the Missouri river has merely to scan the data collected by the Geological Survey. This data shows clearly that the silt load of the Missouri stream, much more heavier than the Mississippi, keeps to the Missouri side of the stream at St. Louis, forcing the Mississippi to the Illinois shore.

The Mississippi, although more brownish in color, carries silt that is relatively "clean." Silt of the Missouri is just plain old mud.

St. Louisans still maintain they are on the Mississippi. However, the Geological Survey merely points to its findings to prove that they're wrong. Map-makers, please take notice!

Life of Riley

By JIM RILEY
Sports Editor

Baseball season is virtually at an end and so is the commissioner trouble that has beset the major leagues during the past summer, at least we are all led to believe that the giant problem was solved when Ford Frick was ushered into office last week on an unanimous 16-club ballot. However, things certainly won't remain on this peaceful note for many years to come, like most of the major league money boys would like us to believe.

I'm not doubting that the choice of Frick for commissioner was a good one, in fact, I believe it to be the only good move made by the club owners during the past year. Rather, I think several of the diamond organization owners will tire of the straight shooting Frick, after he treads heavily on their toes on one or two occasions. I wonder then if the people who make baseball possible will allow the pouting money men to dump Frick in the same manner in which they did A. B. "Happy" Chandler?

Frick's resemblance to the late Judge Landis, first commissioner of baseball, is much deeper than physical. The former sports writer has been very strict on occasions while serving as president of the National League for a long term. He has put players and clubs in their place several times and dished out heavy fines and suspensions where they were deserved most. I feel that Frick will continue his policy of punishing the club violating the rule, rather than play one or two favorites in the field.

The new commissioner began his long career in the public eye as a college professor, but entered the sports writing field immediately after World War I. He moved from Colorado to New York, where he became a part of baseball by traveling with the New York Yankees for many years. Frick then entered the employ of the National League and a couple of years later became president of the circuit, an office he has held ever since, prior to receiving his promotion last week. During his long career Frick has built an outstanding reputation of fair and square play, with no favorite harbored.

Ralph Kiner and Charley "Chuck" Dressen were only two major figures in the National League to test Frick's wrath this season, while Durocher has been censured by the new commissioner many times during the scrappy manager's long career. A host of other's will come in for their share of censorship in the years to come, but unless Frick does a complete about-face his penalties will be of a fair and square nature, making the offender pay for his or their breach of the rules.

The owners decided to take their complaints to New Castle and give the diamond position to a baseball man for the first time in the history of the game. A federal judge and a politician held the position formerly, the first being a terrific success and the second having his many supporters and just as many foes. Included among Chandler's foes were almost all of the club owners, hence the gate for the former Kentucky senator.

Frick enters his new job at a time when the game of baseball, at least the organized variety, is under attack from several sections of the United States. Disgruntled players are filing suits against the game and the federal government is looking into the reserve clauses setup, which has become a controversial subject since Danny Duggan battled baseball in the courts several years ago. The outcome of the situation remains to be seen, but a strong figure in the commissioner's chair should help the diamond interests no end.

The former typewriter pounder also faces the task of doing duty until a new National League president is named. The executive council will undoubtedly carry on the bulk of the work normally done by the commissioner until a new head of the senior circuit is named. However, on strictly official bits of business Frick will be called upon to make the decisions as commissioner and not as president of the National League.

Naming Frick to the commissioner's office also probably means that New York will become the official capital of the diamond world, a position it holds unofficially at the present time. The new major league czar tends to lean toward setting up the headquarters in New York, his home, just as Chandler liked Cincinnati, because it was near his Kentucky Blue Grass country.

Yes, it appears that the owner made good choice in selecting Frick as the new commissioner, although Warren Giles would have also been an above average selection. However, you can bet your thinnest dime that it won't take some of the club owners long to become dissatisfied with Frick's action, a script which they followed, with great success the new commissioner should have a few headaches—$65,000 ain't exactly dried up hay.

East Stroudsburg Falls Before Pen Argyl Eleven, 12-6

Martz Races To Loser's Only Score

Pen Argyl—East Stroudsburg's weekly second half run wasn't enough here at Weona Park's Memorial Stadium on Saturday afternoon, as Pen Argyl High opened its 1951 football campaign with a 12-6 victory over the Cavaliers, before an estimated crowd of 3,000 people. The home team's first half play was the difference between victory and defeat.

East Stroudsburg, forced to play all the first half, except for three kicking appearances, without the services of Captain Marilyn "Ducky" Martz, kept the fast moving green and white clad eleven away from its goal line in the first period, but the charges of Coach Fred "Benny" Leonard broke the scoring famine during the early moments of the second stanza.

Pen Argyl moved the ball to the five yard line, where the first quarter came to an end.

Charley Miller crashed to the two yard stripe and then to the one foot mark. With third and goal to go the Eastburg forward wall repulsed a buck at the line by Co-captain Jim Lugg, but Dick Paulini, on fourth down, rammed over for the touchdown.

Tom Larsson's try for the extra point went wide of the uprights.

The half ended with the score still reading 6-0, with the home team on the long end of the count.

Shortly after the third period got underway Martz, with his left leg heavily taped with adhesive and sponge rubber above his knee, entered the contest and quickly sparked the Cavaliers to a touchdown.

The East Stroudsburg captain carried the ball on three straight plays, gaining 14 and ten yards respectively on the first two tries, then swinging around his own right end for 71 yards and a touchdown. Martz received good blocking at the line and once he circled the end, the speed merchant was able to outrace the entire Pen Argyl team.

Jack Kinnaman's attempt at the extra point fell short of its mark, leaving the score deadlocked at 6-6.

Pen Argyl went ahead to stay in the early stages of the fourth quarter, when a holding penalty and an intercepted pass gave the Leonardmen possession of the ball on the East Stroudsburg 35. Charley Miller hit center for one yard, then Lugg broke off tackle, cut back and raced 34 yards for the six points.

Larsson's attempt at the extra point was blocked by Leon Albert.

East Stroudsburg filled the air with passes during the late stages of the final quarter, but only one, John "Juice" Ernst to Martz, threatened to turn the tide of battle. However, Martz was caught just when it appeared he was about to break into the open.

Following Roamer to the finish line in the feature event were Bill Bachman, Middletown, N. Y.; Charley "Cregar," Washington, N. J.; Clyde Pittenger, Paterson, N. J.; George Fox, Oxford, N. J.; Ray Fleming, Bethlehem; Charley Handker, Kresville; Harry Davis, Middletown, N. Y.; Lewis Hann and Harold Connors, Easton, in that order.

Roamer reached the final event by winning the first qualifying heat, with Bill Johnson, second; Fleming, third; Bob Thorpe, fourth; "Redgie" Montrose and "Tate" Weiler, Middletown, N. Y. and sixth, respectively.

The second qualifying heat found Ralph Davis, Middletown, N. Y., in first place; Jim Heater, Middletown, N. Y., second; Pittenger, third; Ken Loomis, Middletown, N. Y., fourth; Gene Commune, Stroudsburg, fifth, and Don Garrity, Middletown, N. Y., sixth.

Turnesa Wins Reading Open Golf Crown

Reading (AP)—Jim Turnesa, one of six golfing brothers, shot a three over par 74 yesterday to win the $15,000 Reading Open golf tournament with a 72 hole total of 280 at the Berkleigh Country Club. It was his first major tournament win of the year.

Turnesa's four round total was four under par for the 6,600 yard layout. It gave him a two stroke edge over Jack Burke Jr., of Houston, Tex., who finished with a brilliant 36-32-68, three under par.

Jimmy, the 38-year-old veteran from Briarcliff, N. Y., played cautious golf on the last round, winding up with a spectacular par four on the 453 yard eighteenth hole, where his second shot hit the front of the green and spun into the crowd of spectators at the rear.

Striking deliberately, he hit a down hill chip shot to within four feet of the cup and then canned it.

Turnesa was even par on the front nine, but dropped one stroke to par on the tenth where he chipped poorly. He was in trouble only on the 365-yard number 13 where he took a fat seven. That hole was poison all the way as Jimmy hooked his drive into the rough, made only a fair recovery, pitched into a bunker on the edge of the green and then three putted.

Burke, the smooth swinging Texan, came to life on the back nine, finishing with three straight birdies. He had a 36, one over par, on the front nine.

Relief Load Continues To Decline Here

Public assistance load in Monroe county continued its downward swoop in early September with only 744 persons receiving public aid, or about 22 per cent of the county's population compared with about three per cent a year ago.

Figures for the first half of the month released at Harrisburg indicated the state-wide decline is accelerating. By way of comparison, 3,654 persons were dropped throughout the state during the first half of the month, while the average drop was 2,600 persons during the three previous months.

Locally, and elsewhere throughout the State the decline reflects seasonal increase in employment usually experienced this time of the year. It also indicates the continued gradual expansion of industry to keep pace with the national defense program.

Withdrawal of students from jobs to return to schools have added further job opportunities.

The break-down of total number of persons on local public assistance rolls shows that 69 are receiving general assistance, 366 old-age pensions, 223 aid to dependent children, 40 aid to disabled and 56 blind pensions.
